The Parly Press HONGKONG, SEPTEMBER 23ED, 1870.

A-correspondent calls attention to a circumstance long hinted at in various directions, and more than once alluded to as probable in these columns, which according to what is stated in several reliable directions, now seems to be established as a fact. There appears to be a regular organisation in Hongkong, by which duties are levied upon the trade of the port. The arrangements, elaborate as they needs must be, are kept entirely been taken to put it down, as, although there are strong arguments against its legality, a Chinese have an unlimited right to tax their own subjects in the foreign settlement, has been held conclusive against all that can be urged in respect to treaty rights to the contrary. The plan adopted is the establishment of one or more offices in connection with the Guilds, but also having a private understanding with the Mandarins, The duties are thus levied, nominally as mere Guild dues; but in reality they are raised in accordance with the wishes of the officials. without whose concurrence the Guilds would be almost powerless in the matter. Arrangements are thus made by means of which Chinese traders in Hongkong are subjected to the same restrictions as are placed upon those at Canton. Those who ship goods Kiatcha was duly brought back to him. It not explain how the child came to its denti goods, and upon being stopped by any of the Mandarin cruisers which prowl outside the harbour, they have only to show these ting them, so that not only would the transpermits, which are, in point of fact, virtually lowed to proceed unmolested. But wee to the junk which, trusting to its being duly clearance, should proceed to sea without having paid these dues. It would be at once overhauled, and forced to pay to the revenue -the evasion of it in Her Marsary's Crown is very painful as showing the miscrable Colony of Victoria, governed at a greater expense than any other place of the same Majesty the EMPEROR of CHINA are reached. It is impossible to avoid Scylla without fall ing iuto Charybdie.

It is to be hoped that the most searching lar of 27th August continues the startling enquiry will be made into this matter; as it needs very little argument to make it clear how greatly the trade of the Colony must be shackled by such an arrangement. So long as it goes on as at present, we are simply and entirely in the hands of the Chinese officials. who are virtually the Governors of Hongkong, so far as its most important interests are concerned. Two very significant questions at once arise in connection with this subject, each indeed of sufficient importance to form the subject of separate considera | very existence, it cannot collapse without tion. What must be the state of the local long and terrible struggle, in which the youth Government of Hongkong, when a systemsuch as this, striking a vital blow at the space of four weeks 100,000 men have been trading interests of the Colony, can have been allowed to be matured, without any of the au London on the 22nd instant. Money continued thorities becoming aware of the fact, or at least lut 4 per cent. Wheat remained at the last without any effectual means being taken to put it down? And, secondly, how does it come about that the Chinese traders themselves do not make representations on the subject? The explanation of the first matter is not difficult. We are simply brought to the same point, at quotes Colony, "good cargo," at 25 tacls, but a which we are landed in respect to all matters | reliable private authority differs from this figure; concerning the Chinese in this Colony, that by want of attention to two points in the quality is the complete want of any means on the of the Tens lately settled; first, that they part of the Government of ascertaining what contain on undue amount of dust; and, secondly, is going on among the native population, which is sure to develop in second and third The Police, it appears, are aware of the exist- crop teas as the fire goes off. A moderate imount of any reliable particulars. As to the Chinese, experience amply proves that they are always more disposed to acquiesce in anything of this nature than to give information to the authorities. While on board the ship of which I was surgeon, an incident occurred which, I think descryes to be recorded as an illustration of optical delusion that might have become a source of error, and given rise to yet unother story of the famed sea serpent. We were sailing among the islands of the Mistau group, at the entrace of the Gulf of Pechelic There was little wind, and gentle ripples covered the surface of the sea. I was sipping my Congon at the open port of the ward room on the main deck, and while I was admiring the setting sun, watching the rounded outlines of the blue mountains and distant islands against the sky and wondering at the number of sea birds Is also a query often put to us. Of course we wheeling rockwards to their nests, my eve are not willing to make our formula known, making its way steadily through the water. "Ah!" says one," I smell After observing it some time in silence, was sorely puzzled, and could make nothing of it. As it was evidently neither on deck to consult other eyes than my own. Sundry glasses were brought to bear on the suspicious looking object, and after long scrutiny it accomed to be generally decided that it was a large snake, about ten feet long (much longer, according to some,) working its way rigorously against the tide by luteral undulations of the body. So strong was this conviction, that the course of the ship was altered. "but you cannot deceive me! and a bost was got ready for lowering. With a couple of londed revolvers, some boat-books and a fathom or so of lead-line. I made ready for the encounter, intending to range up alongside, shoot the reptile through the head, make him fast by a clove-hitch, and tow him on board to contradict a lady (nearly all these queries in triumph! The sun was streaming in upon this magnificence, gilding it all with a beightened splendour. Presently the officiating cardinal and priests, in their richly embroidered chasubles and dalmatics, marched down through the long line of caldinals, patria che and bishops, accompanied by a crowd of acolytes, and mass was commenced. And then there burst forth the divinest chanting from the Papal choir, and there were crossings and genuflexions, and incrining, and prosti-tings, and lighting of tapers, and ringing of bells. At the elevation of the Host the Swiss.
